Telegraphic News from Various Sources.

Special to the APPEAL

A Forced Marriage.

Louisville, Ky., November 18.—Joseph Kissel, a young man whose home it is at Carrollton, Ky., was yesterday forced to marry Nannie Wright, a chambermaid at the Bidwell Hotel. Kissel has been very devoted to the chambermaid, who at last charged him with her betrayal. She obtained the assistance of two of her brothers-in-law, James Wright and Austin Barber, and, getting into a carriage, the party went in search of Kissel. He was found in a clothing store, where he is employed.

He was called to the door and then forced to enter the carriage at the point of a pistol, after which he was taken to Jeffersonville, where the nuptials were celebrated.

Mr. and Mrs. Kissel will for the time being, make their home with the bride's sister. The girl is pretty and had received much attention from the boarders in the hotel.

Five Men Shot.

Alexandria, Ind., November 18.—The ratification last night of Cleveland's election caused a shooting affray in which five persons were badly injured. Paul Finch and Fred Benton were on the street and it is alleged they killed the wife of a glassblower, who at once knocked Finch down. The latter, a barber, ran across the street to his shop and seized a revolver. Benton snatched the weapon from him and began firing into the crowd. The procession was just passing and the flying bullets got in their work. Tom Beal, Frank Cox, Jim Swinnell, Will Jones and an unknown fifth person were hit. Cox was dangerously wounded. Marshal Finnimore arrested both Finch and Benton, who were taken to Anderson and lodged in jail.

Quicksilver Discovery.

Oakland, Nov. 18.—The Congressional contest between English, Democrat, and Hilborn, Republican, is so close that matters will be carried into Congress for settlement.

Clara Morris.

The Opera House was crowded last night to witness the acting of a woman whose power has moved the strongest man to tears and touched even the hearts of cynical women.

She portrays the character of a wife whose life is given up to her husband who, though devoted to his wife, spends most of his time tending to business.

A German Count, Alfred Von Salten, a former lover of Claire steps in between husband and wife for the purpose of separating them and the husband is so much cognate at a banquet and gets severely off at the omissions made by his wife by the Count who loved her long before she married John Hartner. She, like a true woman tells him that she is happy with John Hartner and her child and that in justice to them both she cannot listen to him.

The Count is too much of a stayer to be laid on the shelf with such little ceremony and his continued attention widens the breach between husband and wife.

Finally the separation comes and in the height of campaign jag Claire is turned into the street with her child. This is the first time for the Count who offers her an asylum in her trouble, and as she thinks him by this time her individual benefactor, she accepts.

Many things occur while here, which expose the villainy of the Count and a small war is turned loose, ending by Claire killing him because he refuses to marry her after bringing such misfortune on her head.

She is tried and acquitted through public sympathy and being as spotless as the day she was turned away from the bosom of her spouse, a little reconciliation scene follows and husband and wife once more recognize each other on the street.

In her flights of remorse and indignation she is wonderful and throws a magnetism over her audience so that they enter into the play with her and are simply carried to original scenes. Her entire cast is good and she should be seen by everyone who can possibly afford it.

The Comstock Hercules.

Leo Hechinger, who more than a year ago won a bet in this city by carrying on his shoulder a keg of beer from C street to the top of Mount Davidson, without taking the beer from his shoulder, and afterwards gained notoriety by acts that did not redound to his credit, has again given evidence of his feats of strength. The Lovelock New Era says: Leo is now in the employ of the White Cloud Company at the mines. Last week he carried a blacksmith's anvil three quarters of a mile up a trail to an elevation of 1400, then took up a bellows, followed by heavy timbers, without resting and went back to the store to ask if there was anything more to go up to the mines.—Chronicle.

Not Correct.

The Carson papers have it that Uncle Bob Patterson was a member of the Virginia Exempt Fire Association. This is decidedly incorrect, for he never was even a member of the old Fire Department, and was not a member of the Exempts. Since his residence in this State he has never been connected with any society, religious or social, except the Pacific Coast Pioneers in this city and the California Pioneers in San Francisco.—Enterprise.

Well girls, ten months of leap year's twelve have slipped by. It won't do to procrastinate much longer.—Tribune.

The editor of our evening contemporary must be getting desperate.

A pleasant surprise party was given Miss Duanna Mitchell last evening. The young folks enjoyed themselves hugely till twelve o'clock when a collation was served. The company then separated with many wishes for her future welfare.

The Reason Why.

While residents are complaining of the smoke arising from the cottonwood leaf fires, it is well to explain the necessity of burning them.

Many suppose that if the leaves were allowed to rot where they fall the soil would be enriched. But when we realize that it takes three years to completely rot cottonwood leaves, it becomes at once apparent that such a course would be folly, as when the rain and snow comes the deposits would be packed down like a thick leather blanket and delicate garden flowers would have a difficult time penetrating it.

The fact of the matter is that Autumn is a very unpleasant season, and the leaves that fall must either be burned or allowed to lay upon the earth and spoil our gardens and grass plots.

The Place That Sought the Man.

An incorrigible police officer died a few days ago says the Portland Transcript, and his friends asked a well-known journalist for an epitaph for his tombstone.
